The Elizabethan

Queen Elizabeth
Composite High School

Edmonton, Alberta

Fourth Edition 1963-64

Our Fourth Edition

of The Elizabethan is dedicated to the '63 - '64

Graduands of Queen Elizabeth Composite

High School whose talents and services have established a tradition of which we are justly proud.

Principal's Message

The world the graduates of 1964 will enter is a quite different world from that of a mere ten years ago. As you leave school to enter business or continue with your studies you will find that some things have not changed. Honesty, diligence, enthusiasm, initiative and pride in your work are values respected by all. It does not matter so much what profession or trade or calling is followed, but it does matter that you bring to that profession or calling the best that is in you.

No matter how the world changes, the underlying values that people live by do not change. The fundamental truths learned in the home, in the church, and in the school are as true today as they ever were. Our hope for you, the graduates of 1964, is a simple one: may you all be good citizens and a credit to your country.

President's Message

As another year passes, a new year begins, and it is hoped that the students of 1963-64, may look back on this year and be proud of all the activities in which they once took part.

During the course of this past year, the Students' Union has operated in a completely different manner from past Students' Unions. This change was the result of the organization of seven functional boards. These boards - activities, advisory, athletics, awards, clubs, and finance - were formed to assure that a greater percentage of students would participate in the organization of school activities. With the formation of these boards, the Students' Union has, therefore, acted as a legislative body governing both the boards and the school activities.

The Students' Union has tried its absolute best this year to promote the extracurricular activities of the school, as it is these activities that unify the students and make a school, a school that will be remembered. Some of the varied activities that the Students' Union has supported throughout the year are the school newspaper, Frosh Welcome Week, Clubs' Day, Dances, Lits, Awards' Day, The Year Play, and the adoption of a foreign child.

At this time I would like to extend my appreciation to the Student Executive and Council, and to Mr. Allison, Mr. Garrett, Mr. Dale, and to the office staff for all their tremendous help that they have given the Students' Union throughout the whole year.

On behalf of the Students' Union I would also like to thank; not only those students who have given so generously of their time and effort to the organization of the school activities, but also to the many other students who have made this a successful and memorable year for Queen Elizabeth.

I would like to express my sincerest wishes to the Graduating class and to the new Student Executive.

Editorial

William Shakespeare once said, "Look into thine own glass." The "glass" of your high school experience is revealed with the unfolding of each page of your yearbook. Memories upon memories are restored, displaying the excitement of school activities and clubs in which juniors, sophomores and seniors alike have wholeheartedly participated.

For the graduates, this has been a year of trial and decision, one that we look back upon proudly, recalling accomplishments and goals attained throughout the years.

We of the Queen Elizabeth yearbook staff sincerely hope that this Fourth Edition of the "Elizabethan" brings you as much pleasure and enjoyment as we have experienced in putting it together. Many thanks are extended to all teachers and students who have so generously co-operated in doing many essential jobs that could not have otherwise been done, especially to the yearbook staff who have shown great enthusiasm in devoting much time and effort to this tremendous task.

AUDREY ELLIOTT

Elizabethan Theme

The ambitious quest of the Elizabethan Age to expand and perfect earthly life rings out in the words of the great Elizabethan dramatist Christopher Marlowe.

"Our souls, whose faculties can comprehend
The wondrous architecture of the world,
And measure every wandering planets' course,
Still climbing after knowledge infinite,
And always moving as the restless spheres,
Will us to wear ourselves and never rest
Until we reach the ripest fruit of all,
That perfect bliss and sole felicity,
The sweet fruition of an earthly crown.

To sum up Christopher Marlowes' poem is to say that the Elizabethan Age expressed the desire for worldly power, the search for knowledge, the restless action, the confidence, the wonder, and above all, the seeking for human perfection.

These are the traditions we students of Queen Elizabeth have inherited and we strive to express them in our daily duties and thoughts toward the future. In this day of space exploration and radical reforms we need the individualists who can think for themselves and fulfill their ambitions. With individuals of such qualities, the generation of today may curb the inevitable "1984" and accomplish another Elizabethan Age. Therefore, students of Queen Elizabeth when you scurry down the halls and enter a class remember our motto: "To the utmost of one's ability."

In Memoriam

God is sometimes so abrupt in his way
That many of us look on with dismay.
The present may seem so dark,
But God looked after Noah with an arc.

A fellow student we all knew well
In the best years of his life has fell.
His loyalty and integrity to all
Will be a cherished memory for us to recall.

He Became a Man

BY: RICHARD LONG

A time-worn clock, resting on a shelf above the beaten, ink-stained desk of Miss Armstead, ticked away the seconds until it showed 2:25 P. M. The door of the sixth grade class-room jerked open and the tall, slight, middle-aged teacher paced in. She wore stylish clothes and an expression of concern. To little Ronny Lancaster, seventh seat, fourth row, she always looked like that, except this time she was looking at him. As she moved down the row toward him, all eyes in the class followed. When she reached the dark haired lad, she whispered to him.

"Your mother just called and she wants you at home."

Without hesitation he gathered his books and went for his coat.

The December wind blew bits of sand that cut at his face as he dashed along the slippery, ice-covered walk outside the school. He was home quickly and along the way he tried to think but couldn't imagine what his mother had called him home for.

Clutching his books, he ran up the garden trail to the house where he had lived the past seven years. The red shingled bungalow was one of many identical houses in the town for this was an Alberta mining camp--Western Monarch.

His mother was waiting impatiently as he burst into the kitchen. She was short and podgy with red hair that glistened in the mid-afternoon sunlight which came dancing through silky, white curtains, hanging silently before two lengthy windows above the breakfast table.

"Your dad's been hurt at Crown Mine; it sounds bad, son. I'm going to the hospital right now. Run and get his cheque at the mine office."

Without any more she was gone. Butterflies fluttered in his stomach. His dad was hurt. How bad? Would he die? Ronny swallowed the lump in his throat and shook the thought from his head.

He had to pick up hid dad's cheque first; then he would do his daily chores.

Little Ronny, as the husky miners at the office called him, liked to pick up his Dad's cheque. He felt important, and liked to listen to their tales. But he knew this time that he couldn't stay, not even for a little while; his brother and youngest sister were at home alone.

When he got back, Ronny tucked the cheque under the big chime clock on the dining-room cabinet. He'd have to trust his brother Jerry with his sister while he was gone again.

The quiet winter scene of a little town covered with snow had all but disappeared. The chinook which had blown in just after noon had taken the winter from the valley and buried it in the plains above. It tossed Ronny's wagon at his heels incessantly as he ran before it down the alley, past Repas' hedge and Albrech's out-house, then along the trail that Ronny himself had worn by his treks to the pits. Nearly every day for the past four years he had pulled his wagon to the slack pits to load it with the dusty, black, low-grade coal to burn in the kitchen stove. Through one clump of brush then two more. There he knelt on one knee, out of sight of the pit foreman who was leaning against the wall of his shack. If he was caught "borrowing" some slack, he'd surely catch it.

Over by the shack, Joe Stalker took a deep, final drag then flicked the cigarette butt to the ground. He stood tall, defying the warm wind as it flapped through his half-opened shirt. Then as fate would have it, he turned and strolled into the shack.

In a flash, Ronny pulled the wagon down hill and behind the pile of slack, out of sight of the whole camp. It seemed always to take nine shovelsfull to fill his wagon but Ron was soon covering the load with an old potato sack. The foreman was still in his shack. He'd have to go now, so with another quick glance over the pile, he assured himself that it was safe to start. Dragging the heavy wagon up the steep hill, Ronny stumbled, then fell. At that instant he thought he heard a door open, but he didn't take time to check. Straining all the power he had, the small boy jerked the wagon to top, then around the bushes and out of sight. Just as he did, Joe pushed the door open and jogged to an approaching truck. Joe hopped on and pointed toward a small pile of coke. The driver backed his truck to it and dumped the load.

Ronny dashed across the open stretch, his red wagon bouncing behind. As he spun north around Unsworth's backhouse, he thought he heard someone call but he didn't stop. When he passed the Repas' again, he heard Celia giggle and disappear inside her house. She was nearly a year younger than he but they were true friends.

Home again, he unloaded his wagon then relit the kitchen stove. At 3:30, Karen, Lynda, and Lily came bouncing into the kitchen. All at once they flooded their big brother with questions.

"Hold it, hold it. Mom's not here. She went to Drumheller."

"How come?" inquired Lynda, the youngest of the three girls.

"Well, I guess Dad's been hurt at the mine so he's in the hospital."

"Oh no, how bad?" added Karen. She was nine, dark haired and had her mother's crystal blue eyes.

"I don't know, I don't even know how long Mom's going to be gone, so let's get supper started. Jerry and Lily can set the table; Karen and I'll cook the food. Lynda, you can sweep, O.K.?"

"What about me?" Jerry asked, feeling quite left out of the thrill of making supper.

"You can take care of your little sister for me."

Jerry scurried into the dining room followed by little Shelia.

At the stove, fat was spitting from between scorching sausages as there came a knock at the door. Lynda put down her broom and invited in Christine Taylor, the next door neighbour. She was blonde and pretty and nearly eighteen.

"Well, well, well aren't we all a busy lot! And look at mother by the stove."

With fork in hand, Ronny chuckled and looked at himself. He was clad in a full apron which he realized must have looked funny. They all joined in the laughter.

"Would you like me to help in any way, Ronny?"

"No thanks Christine, we're doing fine and it's fun."

"Well if you do, just come right over."

That night the wind blew harder and the house cracked its knuckles. Ronny laid awake for a long time. He remembered all the times his Dad had taken him on hikes in the hills and how he loved him so. Somehow he smelt his dad's pipe tobacco and visualized the many times he had blown out his dad's matches. Ronny whispered a prayer then drifted to the land of dreams.

A warm sun fell on the little mining camp nestled in the beautiful Red Deer River Valley. It was Saturday, clean-up day. The Lancaster children weren't afraid of work, and they set to their task of house cleaning with no complaints. Soon it was done. The afternoon was a busy one full of visits from neighbours, and relatives. Ronny's mother's brother, a tall, red haired business man from Edmonton arrived only minutes before his sister came from Drumheller. When she came, Ronny ran to greet her with a kiss.

"How's John doing, June?" Uncle Dave asked.

"It's hard to say, Dave. Last night it was nearly the end but this morning he was better. I just don't know what to do."

"Well right now you need to go to bed. Come on. I'll go in with you tomorrow. Ronny has been doing a great job while you were gone."

Sunday morning was again beautiful. The sun forgot it was winter as it shone brightly over the valley town. The sunbeams continued to dance and promise good-will, but they couldn't keep their promise, for a dark cloud moved in front and covered the sun.

Ronny was alone in the house; his sisters were playing next door and Jerry at a pal's. Suddenly Ronny realized that there was someone knocking at the door. He opened it to face Christine.

"Hi Christine, sorry, I must have been sleeping a little."

"Hi Ronny," She put her hand on his shoulder but didn't speak at first. Ronny caught a look in her eyes. It was a look of sadness and one of broken thoughts.

"What's the matter?" he asked as he saw her eyes glisten.

"Your Dad didn't make it, Ronny. He won't be coming home."

Ronny turned away from her but didn't say a thing. He walked to the big, green arm chair in the corner by the stove, where his Dad would sit every night when he came home from the mine. Ronny remembered, how for hours, Dad used to sit there and puff away on his pipe. Ron sat in that chair and gazed at the floor. He didn't know what to think about, not knowing whether to cry or not. He had spent the first ten years of his life as a boy; he decided to spend the rest of his life as a man.

THE REAPER
By: Wendy Albrecht

The Skelton trees stand, bone white
Against a tomb black sky--
Their searching fingers scrape the wailing wind,
Forcing it to scream in pain and mourning.
A waning moon weeps tears of bitter stars
And thunder clouds roll cold and black in anguish.
All these signal the coming of one as cold and feared
As all these sighs of tormented nature
Torn from her embrace of true, sweet life.
An untouched, immortal phantom,
The Reaper comes to claim his own.

All final entries were judged by
Elsie Park Gowan, noted Alberta
Playwright.

Art Club

Sponsor: Mrs. Darewych; President: Lori Stevenson;
Membership: 15

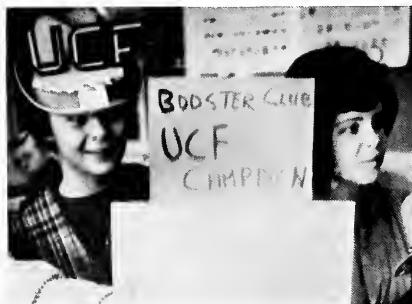

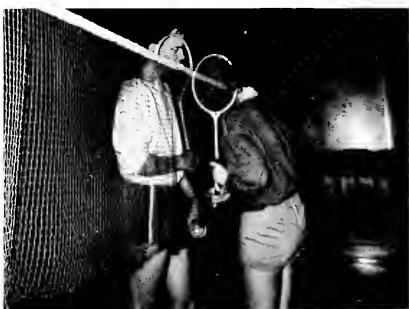

The objective of the Art Club is to create an active interest in art. So far this year, its members have had an art gallery, set up art displays, made jewellery, demonstrated Ukrainian Easter Egg designs, sketched and painted.

Badminton Club

Sponsor: Mr. N. A. Sande; President: Albert Jones;
Membership: 55

The Badminton Club has the distinction of having more members than any other club in the school. The objective of this club is to interest the students in Badminton and to practice for interscholastic competition.

Booster Club

Sponsor: Mr. J. D. Collins; President: Daphne Luchka;
Membership: 50

An invaluable club to the school is the Booster Club. This club's purpose is to further school spirit. Although at the moment there are only fifty members, the ultimate goal is to have every student a member.

This year the club has sponsored sock-hops, a yearbook contest, and boys' basketball games.

Projection Club

Sponsor: Mr. Hamilton

A new club to the school this year is the projection club. Although this club isn't widely publicized it is very active. Every noon the members are in the projection room learning more about the projector, films, and such things.

Radio Club

Sponsor: Mr. Collins

This is part of the Booster Club. Every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday our radio station broadcasts school activities, club announcements, and music over the P. A. from 11:30-11:45.

Weight Lifting Club

Sponsor: Mr. Eccleston

Boys, including 97 pound weaklings to 197 pound strong men congregate in the gymnasium supply room at noon every day. Their aim is to change all that baby fat to real he-man muscles to impress the opposite sex.

Elizabethan Players

Sponsor: Mrs. Jha

As well as entertaining themselves, this club entertains the whole school. A one-act play, "For Better or Worse", written by David Bertsch, was performed by this group. "The Courting of Marie Jenven", and "Sunday Costs Five Pesos" was put on tape by this group for the school.

The club was spotlighted on "A Night of Fine Arts" which was held in May.

French Club

Sponsor: Mrs. Nicol; President: Candy Ingram;
Membership: 8

With only a very few members, this club is one of fun. Taking part in lits and skits is only part of it. Behind all the fun is the enjoyment of learning about France and the French.

Glee Club

Sponsor: Mr. Harrison

The Glee Club is one which everyone enjoys. At one time or another everyone sings. In fact that is just what this club does. Its members sing for us at lits and concerts as well as for themselves. Each year the club has more members and it is hoped that the rise will continue.

Hobby Club

Sponsor: Mr. McLeod; President: Earl Daneluk;
Membership 25

If you like cars, aircraft and other construction hobbies, this is the club for you. The members have a race track and hold races with cars they make themselves. There are also contests for building the best car and at the end of the year, the member with the most points is awarded a trophy.

Library Club

Sponsor: Mrs. MacPhee; President: Dina Nichyporuk;
Membership: 35

This is the most active club in the school. Every day its members are working in the library as assistants to the librarian, ready to serve you. For anyone interested in a career as a librarian, or anyone who likes books, this is a worthwhile club to join.

Nurses (Amy Lord Chapter)

Sponsor: Mrs. Daneluk; President: Linda Hicks;
Membership: 21

This club is for all future nurses. It sponsors the big sister movement, has up to date information on nursing and tries to interest the girls in Social Service activities.

This year the girls made toys for hospitals, visited the Rehabilitation Center, sang carols at the home for elderly people, and went for play therapy at the Glenrose Home.

Orchestra

Sponsor: W. Cummings; President: Ron Schienbein;
Membership: 20

The school orchestra plays in all our school lits. Its members have produced a group called the Dixieland Band. On a "Night of Music" the orchestra put on a splendid performance.

Photo

Sponsor: Mr. Tobert, Mr. Laidlaw, and Mr. Kotyshn;
President: Ken Busby; Membership: 42

The photography club is one of the more active clubs in the school. "Just snap and develop" seems to be their motto. For those not so good at this, there is no problem, as they are taught the fundamental aspects of photography. The results of this club's work are all over. This year the club made Christmas Cards, took pictures of all school activities, and printed pictures for the yearbook.

Science Club

Sponsor: Mr. Gavinchuk and Miss Kass; President:
Kirk MacGregor; Membership: 10

This club encourages an interest in science. Its members independently carry out experiments using school science equipment. If any member wants to, he can make a project for the Edmonton Science Fair which is held annually.

Swim Club

Sponsor: Mr. Bell; President: Jim Leech; Membership: 20

Competitive swimming is the main function of the swim club. Members of the club have participated in school competition, as well as, intramural school competition.

Table Tennis

Sponsor: Mr. Ewanchuk; President: Karl H. Adam; Membership: 20

If you enjoy relaxing, sports, and city championship cups, then this is the club for you. The table tennis club provides the students with an extra-curricular activity with all these advantages plus many more.

For the past two years, Q.E. has held the Cup and wishes to continue to do so.

United Nations

Sponsor: Mr. Muin; President: Phyllis Meyer; Membership: 15

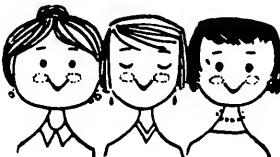

The U.N. Club's purpose is to create a better understanding among the people of the world. This club is widely publicized and has had many activities this year. There have been interesting and well known people visiting us from other countries of the world.

Young Sophisticates

The Young Sophisticates hold executive meetings monthly where they plan further functions and guest speakers. This year they have had guest speakers on such topics as cosmetics, hair-setting and combing, accessories, skin care, lingerie and modelling. Presently they are working with the fab and dress classes on a fashion show where they will assist the girls with make-up, accessories, scenery, and modelling techniques. These girls help to set the grooming standards for our school. Good work, girls!

Girls' Sports

VOLLEYBALL

Sportwise, the girls started the year showing a high degree of enthusiasm and skill, making the choice of teams a difficult task for the Junior and Senior coaches. On the Junior level, a newcomer to Queen E, Miss Olynyk, did a marvelous job of putting a team of girls together. The junior girls started the season rather doubtfully but finished near the top. (5th place)

Mrs. Shapka, the senior coach, was proud as she saw her team on equal standings with the top teams. Even the traditional enemy, Vic, was surprised as they ended two battles with Queen E in a deadlock, and last year's champs, the Ross Shep team, fell before the senior girls. It was a close league with the team finishing in fourth place behind Bonnie Doon, Vic, and Ross Shep.

BASKETBALL

Meanwhile in basketball, Mrs. Shapka coached two girls' teams as they battled for the spotlight. Unfortunately they did not quite reach their goal. However, the girls put forth much effort and fought hard and long for what honors they did receive.

Both the junior and senior girls showed co-operation and good sportsmanship and had a very enjoyable season.

GIRLS' P.E. 20 OFFICIALS

All the P.E. 20 girls assisted coaches by acting as officials for all intramural sports and junior high games. They have recently organized a club with Miss Niblock as their sponsor. Thank you girls.

Boys' Sports

BASKETBALL

The Junior Knights were the dark horse this year in city wide competition. They, under the spirited coaching of Mr. MacDonald, fought their way successfully up to the semi-finals where Austin O'Brian squeezed past them to destroy all hopes of a Junior Championship which was well within sight. A fine try, by a fine group of players.

The Senior Knights hampered by lack of players and injuries pulled down only three victories this season. This is not to say that we (the student body) and their experienced coach, Mr. Laidlaw, are not proud of these hard working athletes; we are proud of the endless effort they put into practising. Good try boys!

FLAG FOOTBALL

This year's intramural flag football enterprise turned out to be a real success to both participants and P.E. staff. The grade eleven room, 207, won the first tough round. Grade eleven room, 114, won the second round. To these two rooms go congratulations well deserved.

FLOOR HOCKEY

The enthusiasm of both spectator and participant illustrates the way in which intramural floor hockey went over this year. It's the hope of every participant that floor hockey will become a regular thing, at least this is the hope of room 114 who took all honors. Congratulations to both room 114 and the hard working officials.

P.E. 20 BOY OFFICIALS

Thanks and appreciation are extended to the 45 odd P.E. 20 boys who officiated the majority of the intramural games this year - A tedious job well done.

Junior Basketball

Senior Basketball

ROW ONE: Bruce Edwards, Jack Rawlyck, Bob Davies, Captain; Keith Hesselden. ROW TWO: Pete Harris, Al Jones, Terry Rawlyck, Mr. Laidlaw, Glenn Hemmingway, Dennis Johnston, Frank Heron.

Cross Country

Activities

INTRAMURAL CROSS-COUNTRY

Despite cold drizzling rain, this year's Intramural Cross-Country race proved to be a tremendous success. Close to 300 hopefuls laced on their sneakers in "the run for the blisters." The mob was largely composed of eager (who am I kidding?) Phys. Ed. boys. From these water-soaked "road-runners", emerged a few tired but rightfully proud victors. They were, in order: Don Cottrel, Jay Anderson, Dwight Chomin, Angus Hay and Peter Wendel. I heard one very appropriate comment after the race which seems to sum the race up quite well; "It was a LONG, LONG, two and one quarter miles."

INTERSCHOOL CROSS-COUNTRY RESULTS

In the Interschool Cross-Country meet with Eastglen, Queen Elizabeth once again showed her true colors. Eastglen runners did capture first and second place but Queen Elizabeth runners captured just about every other position beyond second place, thus, giving Queen Elizabeth the all-over win. Some of those who led the way to victory are: Glen Hemmingway, Peter Windel, Gene Kirkpatrick, and Dexter Harker.

Interesting Personalities

Diane Damery
Miss Newsprint 1963-64

"Interesting! Who me?!!"
Shock was the initial reaction when they learned that they had been chosen as one of the interesting persons at Queen E. this year.

These people are of interest to our school, not only for their contributions to the school but in other fields as well.

To say they are active is an understatement. They work hard in school as well as out of school and, thus, have achieved high honors that are well deserved. Congratulations!

FEELINGS OF A FROSH

How well a Grade Ten remembers Frosh Day! How could he ever forget? The first day, and through the whole week, confusion prevails. A feeling of loneliness seizes the Frosh. He finds he has come a long way from the secure world of a Grade Nine. He has to bear the humiliation of stumbling into a Biology 20 class, thinking it was Literature 10. Forgetting books in a classroom, and running back to retrieve them, leaves a Frosh's nerves jagged. During Frosh Welcome Week, he goes through arduous tasks assigned by lordly seniors. In spite of all this, he finds that as time passes, his dreams of high school are fulfilled and he eagerly awaits the following year in Queen Elizabeth with the same anticipation he possessed upon entering it.

White Gift

The students of Queen Elizabeth once again displayed their fine sense of community spirit and citizenship. This Christmas, Queen Elizabeth adopted eight needy families in the neighborhood and put on a food and silver drive to make their holidays a little merrier.

A sock-hop was held with the admission fee being one white-wrapped tin of food which contributed immensely to the cause, with sixteen boxes of tins having been collected. Later these tins were displayed under the Christmas tree in the upper foyer. A silver drive was also held, with the profits totalling $102. 08.

Eight hampers were prepared with the food and money collected, each containing one turkey along with all the trimmings in varied amounts according to the size of the family.

The hampers were gratefully received and Queen Elizabeth students enjoyed their holidays, secure in the knowledge that they helped make someone's Christmas a little merrier.

T'winter Twist

The "Twinter Twist" was held in the freezing month of November 1963. At the gym door two young ladies were handing out little corsages of white snowmen. The gym was beautifully decorated by the students' union with foil snow flakes and draping white streamers. The swinging C.J.C.A. Pharaohs added the musical note to this grand winter occasion. All were enjoying themselves to the "twisting twist" and "shimmy" when suddenly the lights dimmed and the evening ended with a sentimental waltz.

Muk Luk

Mardi Gras

This year much enthusiasm went into the Second Annual Ice Statue contest sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce in Laurier Park. Queen Elizabeth students worked laboriously until the final judging and came up with characters of "Yogi Bear" and "Mr. Abernathy," which received second honors.

"A job well done!"

Grad Class President

Well Grads, we have finally reached our goal - graduation. In some cases it has taken three years and in others four, but whether three or four, they have been years of hard work and fun. But what now? We have reached a fork in the road of education. In this parting of ways many of us will break into the new adult world, well prepared and others will continue to be hitting the books in the new world of campus life. But which ever road you choose, you will always continue to be learning.

I wish all of you the best of luck for the future.
